

Last Update on January 17, 2019:

Unfortunately, we could not add the 50 or more students waiting for this course because we could not find a classroom big enough to take them all. Also we have had multiple assignments, and we believe it is too late to take any new students. We therefore closed the registration on this course. I would like to apologize to those who could not register, however I will keep the original waiting list maintained by the department and my own list that we collected during lecture time, just in case anyone on those lists needs my help or support in the future. I will also give them priority in case any of my future courses end up with a waiting list; and also for EE590.
